Domaine Heitz-Lochardet – Pre-arrival 2018

Chassagne-Montrachet, Côte de Beaune

At his family Domaine Heitz-Lochardet, Armand Heitz makes pure, aromatic, expressive burgundies that are full of flavour and silken charm. His talents are especially worthy of note, for few winemakers are able to conjure such distinguished and compelling expressions of Burgundy in both colours. The centrepiece of Armand's viticultural philosophy is sustainability and to express his terroirs, he works in a delicate fashion, always meticulous and deliberate at every stage of his winemaking process. Domaine Heitz-Lochardet represents some of the best from a new generation of dynamic vigneron who are redefining the future of the Côte d'Or. We are thrilled to offer our allocation of the domaine's finest showing yet, the vivacious and infinitely charming vintage 2018, offered on a pre-arrival basis (availability: December 2020).

Jean-Marc Roulot
Meursault, Côte de Beaune

The Roulot name is revered by many as representing the finest of white wines produced from Burgundy terroirs. The wines are crafted, not in the sense of any artificial construction, but by the interweaving of layers. Jean-Marc Roulot uses this intense, delineated style to give voice to a particularly wide array of different sites he works with, delivering them with stunning definition. Starting with the 2014 vintage, Jean-Marc Roulot has started on a micro-négoce project to complement the domaine’s portfolio. Thanks to this, his gifted hands now produce a few coveted crus in Puligny-Montrachet, Meursault and Corton-Charlemagne in very limited production. The following wines are available ex-stock Singapore:

Domaine AMI

Maranges, Côte de Beaune

Domaine AMI is an impressive and relatively new micro-winery set up by two good friends, Paul Perarnau and Willy Roulendes. 2014 marked AMI's first vintage, and the wines sold out instantly upon release. Each successive vintage has continued this pattern; blink and you'll miss them. AMI has rapidly captured the attention of Burgundy lovers with lively but seriously well-crafted wines made following an honest-to-goodness low-intervention ethos. They operate as both a domaine and a micro-négoce, and require that all of the grapes that go into their wines must be farmed organically. This is the case whether the fruit comes from their owned 3-ha of vineyards, or are purchased from their network of like-minded grape-farming friends. While AMI's wines can be considered to be natural wines, Paul clarified that their motivation didn't stem from a desire to follow trends. Rather, they had found inspiration in the approach taken by the “original” Burgundy winemakers: the Cistercian monks who worked according to the rhythm of nature. Paul and Willy wish to make wines that are — in their own words — “seductive, sparkling, warm, meaningful... nourished by simple generosity”. Our inaugural Domaine AMI allocation from the gregarious 2018 vintage is now here. These are authentic, wholesome, luscious burgundies loaded with personality and should not be missed. All wines are available ex-stock Singapore.

Domaine de la Cras (Marc Soyard)

Dijon, Côte d'Or

The rise of Domaine de la Cras has been nothing short of phenomenal. The fact that it has achieved its near-mythic status in barely five vintages, and with just Bourgogne-level wines, is mightily impressive. All this is due to the genius of its extraordinary young vigneron, Marc Soyard, who once worked for Jean-Yves Bizot. Marc takes a flexible approach to his winemaking decisions. Depending on the conditions of each vintage, the reds are partial whole-cluster or 100 percent whole-cluster. There is only a small trace of added sulphur in his wines and all vinification is done with natural yeasts. His wines are a reminder that not all Burgognes are the same; his may as well have come from a different planet. A rock star in the making.

Domaine Coquard-Loison-Fleurot

Flagey-Echezeaux, Côte de Nuits

Coquard-Loison-Fleurot, or 'CLF', as it is often referred to by fans, isn't exactly a new domaine. Historically, their focus was on the domestic French market. But with the arrival of a new generation — the dynamic Claire Fleurot managing the domaine’s commercial activities, tag-teamed by the gifted Thomas Colladot looking after viticulture and vinification — the domaine started looking outwards to other markets, and its ascent thus began. Thomas Colladot is known to many as a close friend of Sébastien Cathiard. Indeed, the two share a nearly identical philosophy with regards to viticulture and vinification. Thomas’ special touch is now turbocharging the domaine to superstardom. Burgundy critics and writers are enraptured, unanimously citing CLF as one of their most important recent “discoveries”. The domaine’s 2017s are a case in point. They are simply ravishing with gorgeous purity, lifted aromatics and succulent fruits, brimming with details and persistence. Don’t miss these beauties. The 2017s are now available ex-stock Singapore.

Chevreux-Bournazel – Champagne La Parcelle Connigis, Vallée de la Marne (Champagne)

This tiny jewel of an estate is making enigmatic, inimitable Champagnes out in pretty much the middle of nowhere. Stéphanie Chevreux and Julien Bournazel are an incredibly warm and hospitable husband-and-wife team. They work a tiny 0.4-hectare biodynamic Pinot Meunier vineyard in the outer reaches of the Marne valley, doing everything by hand from beginning to end, right down to writing the serial number on each individual bottle. The vineyard, fondly referred to as La Parcelle, was planted in the 1980s with Pinot Meunier. It benefits from an almost due-south exposure, with a very steep 40-degree slope. The subsoil is calcareous and the soil is shallow, composed of marl and silt. Fermentation takes place naturally, without added yeast. The wines spend at least eight months in barrel and do not undergo malolactic fermentation. This is followed by ageing in a cellar for at least two years. The champagnes of La Parcelle are incisive, supremely elegant and mineral. Their bubbles are incredibly fine, especially for Pinot Meunier, and after airing they reveal fruity, nutty aromas, along with a whiff of the ocean. They are soft and pillowy — a ‘luxurious’ mouthfeel — but bracing in their energy. Total annual production is only around 3,000. Now, did we say “unicorn”? All champagnes are available ex-stock Singapore.

Jérôme Balmét

Vaux-en-Beaujolais, Beaujolais

Beaujolais seems to be continually in a happy state of constant change and progress, and we have been stunned by the quality of the next generation of vigneron who, dare we say, are raising the bar even higher than their legendary predecessors. And one to watch very closely is Jérôme Balmét. His wines have become more accomplished with each new vintage since his debut in 2012. What draws us to his wines is his determination to push for greater purity in every vintage, without sacrificing pleasure or cleanliness. Winemaking is decidedly non-interventionist: spontaneous fermentation by way of indigenous yeast, zero additives (not even SO₂), and no fining or filtration. Don't let his playful labels fool you: these are wines that are made with dedication and seriousness. It takes time, effort and skill to make wines that are this delicious and yet remain true to his all-natural philosophy. These wines are impossible to resist, and one bottle will only leave you looking for another bottle half an hour after opening the first. Don't miss these delectable (and affordable) wonders.

Le Grain de Sénevé – Hervé Ravera Marchampt, Beaujolais

Hervé Ravera may not be working in the famous crus of Beaujolais, but that hasn't stopped him from producing wines of stunning quality. His domaine's name "Le Grain de Sénevé" is inspired by the parable of the mustard seed in the gospels; it is a metaphor for the biblical Kingdom of Heaven. And this is what Hervé is cultivating here: his own 2 hectares of stony, schistous, volcanic-soil paradise. Ravera's wines typically see semi-carbonic fermentation in concrete tank without pumping-over, followed by eight to fourteen months of aging in cement foudres or steel tanks before bottling. His wines are bottled unfiltered, unfiltered and with no added sulphur. His wines remind us of why people love (and ought to love) Beaujolais – for its candid charm, fragrance and unmatched drinkability. These gems are even greater treasures because they're so good, yet don't cost a fortune.

Domaine des Marnes Blanches

Sud Revermont, Côte du Jura

Géraud and Pauline Fromont are farmers first and foremost, and darn good ones at that. Caring for vines comes as second nature to them — they were both born and raised in the Jura, and grew up working on farms that practiced polyculture. Their Domaine des Marnes Blanches's vineyards are based in Sud Revermont, an area that's fast gaining the attention of wine aficionados of late not least because it has become a hotbed for Jura's most talked-about talents, such as Jean-François Ganevat and the Labet family. Like most of their peers, the Fromonts make a variety of cuvées ranging from whites in both the ouillé and sous-voile styles, to crémants (sparkling wine) and single-varietal reds, as well as a delicious vin de paille ("straw wine", a sweet wine made made with grapes that have been allowed to dry on straw mats, hence the name). For ouillé (or "topped up") whites, aging vessels are filled up so that the wine is protected from extended oxygen contact — the "usual" way of making wine, so to speak. Meanwhile, sous-voile whites are matured under a thin voile, (i.e., "veil") of yeast, similar to sherry, but with greater exposure to oxygen. These two are gifted winemakers and their range of wines is a testament to their talent. Though the wines are vinified with next to no sulphur addition, they suffer from no flaws and no funk. Theirs are high-energy, crystalline wines brimming with absolute class and a special eloquence. They have an especially dedicated following in Japan and the US, aside from of course their native France.

Coco Farm & Winery

Ashikaga, Tochigi, Japan

Coco Farm & Winery has been producing joyous, authentic wines for over three decades, and continues to assert a significant influence on the Japanese natural wine industry. It has been the training ground for some of the most renowned winemakers in Japan today — including Takahiko Soga (Hokkaido) and Yutaka Nakajima (Nagano). Yet the origin of its founding in the 1950s stemmed from a teacher’s desire to help his intellectually disadvantaged students to find meaningful and productive agricultural work. Coco Farm’s work ethos is a cohesive blend of rigorous all-natural farming with a dedication to low-intervention winemaking. The current chief winemaker Toyoichiro Shibata still applies the philosophy the founders believed in — “Listen to the voices of the grapes and make them the wines they want to be” — so, in the cellar, fermentation is carried out by indigenous yeasts, without chaptalisation, and SO₂ is only used in homeopathic doses, if at all. Coco Farm wines are wholesome, unpretentious and delicious, and they speak proudly of their origin. They are incredibly well-made, and radiate elegance and a gentle joy. All wines are available ex-stock Singapore.
